Tasting notes

This Carmenere is a ruby-red colour with violet hues. The nose is intense and fresh with notes of ripe fruit, pepper and spices. In the mouth, its fruity character is again apparent with ripe tannins, a smooth texture and refreshing acidity.

About the wine

The grapes come from an ungrafted vineyard on deep gravel soils in Isla de Maipo, cooled by afternoon breezes from the Pacific 60 km away. They are fully destemmed and cold-soaked for a few days before fermentation. Carmenère was long mistaken for Merlot in Chile and was only correctly identified in 1994.
